Advanced security awareness driver training

"The CEO of an international company asks his driver to ensure him, despite the anticipated meeting, to arrive at the VIP departure lounge of Schiphol on time for his flight to Singapore."

"An executive chauffeur working for a listed company notices that on a regular basis, unknown cars are parked close to the premises. There are constantly two persons in the car. He decides to report this to the security manager of the company and makes a note of it in his daily report. "

Cortex offers

High demands are made on the profession of an executive chauffeur.

A professional driver needs to have an excellent vehicle control and extensive knowledge of specialist driving skills. He needs to ensure that both the vehicle and its passenger(s) reach their destination in an adequate, safe and comfortable way.

Cortex believes that a professional driver, in addition to safe and comfortable driving, plays an additional role for his client; namely in the field of security. The driver is the so-called 'eyes and ears' of the organization and should be able to recognize the safety risks at an early stage and report them. This way will a skilled driver deliver an important contribution to minimize risks.

In case of a security risk, the driver must be able to anticipate and neutralize the incident through his driving behavior and skills. If nonetheless an incident occurs, the skilled driver should be able to handle the situation immediately to regain control. These skills are also important for people who have a higher risk profile and do not use a driver.

To achieve this, a driver must be educated and trained in these specific competences. Cortex starts any training program with an intake. This creates a customized program for the participant, making the chances of success substantially bigger.

Cortex is a recognized CCV training institute and offers:

- Basic driver training (CCV D1)
- Continued driver training (CCV D2)
- Advanced driving courses (D3 and D4)
- Recertification Training of all levels
